SPRING HAS SPRUNG!

PLAY WITH US!

Float or Sink

You'll need: A puddle, a bucket or bag, things that can get wet

Grab a bucket or bag, and collect a few items that you can get wet. Can you find a rock, a plastic lid, a leaf, and a toy to use? Find a deep puddle (or fill your sink!), and guess which objects will float and which ones will sink. Put them in the water to see what happens!

Spring Scoop Race

You'll need: A spoon, a bucket or bowl, plastic easter eggs or small balls

Set up a race course, with a spoon and your easter egg/balls at one end, and a container at the other. Carefully balancing the egg on your spoon, walk as quickly as you can to the bucket and put the egg inside. You can make the game more challenging by having multiple eggs/balls to transport, making a tape line on the floor you need to balance on, or creating obstacles you need to step over or around.

Splashing in the puddles

I hope I won't get wet

Vs 2—Stomping in the puddles...

*Vs 3—Jumping in the puddles... And now
I'm really wet!*

What do you call a snowman in the spring?
A puddle!

CRAFT TIME!

Dance Sticks

You'll need: A pen/chopstick/kebab stick, ribbons or grocery bag, tape/glue Cut several pieces of ribbon about 2 feet long, and attach them to the end of your stick/pen using tape or glue. (Don't have any ribbon? Try cutting long strips of a plastic grocery bag.) Now you've made yourself a dance stick! What kind of movements can you do with it? Can you use it to draw shapes in the air? Can you use it to write letters? What happens if you move it slowly or very quickly? After you've tried to move it in different ways, turn on some music and dance!

Hello Friends!

After winter comes the spring—it's here! My kids come into the house each evening soaking wet, covered in mud, and simply delighted with all of the new places and activities they can enjoy now that the snow has melted. Our smiles, and our number of laundry loads, are many!

Spring is a new beginning in so many ways, and I hope that you'll find hope and joy in these brighter days. Take time to splash in puddles, to explore the greening world, and to dance in the sunshine!

Missing you all,

Elya (for Beverly & Kari too)
